EXPLANATORY NOTE

(This note is not part of the Regulations)

These Regulations amend the statutory provisions that require equal treatment of men and women in respect of occupational pension schemes. The amendments made by the Regulations reflect requirements of European Community law (specifically Article 141 of the Treaty of Rome on equal pay), as applied in a number of cases before the European Court of Justice and the domestic courts⁽¹⁴⁾. Part 2 of the Regulations applies to occupational pension schemes generally. Parts 3 and 4 of the Regulations introduce new provisions applying only to armed forces occupational pension schemes.

Under section 62 of the Pensions Act 1995 (c. 26), occupational pension schemes that do not already contain provision for equal treatment are to be treated as if they contained an “equal treatment rule”. This enables a woman who receives less favourable treatment than a man in the same employment to complain to an employment tribunal. Men treated less favourably than women may also present complaints. Section 63(4) of the Pensions Act 1995 applies to an equal treatment rule certain time limits and other provisions that are imposed by section 2 of the Equal Pay Act 1970 (c. 41) in relation to an “equality clause” in employment contracts. These time limits are modified, in their application to an equal treatment rule, by section 63(4) of the Pensions Act 1995 and by the Occupational Pension Schemes (Equal Treatment) Regulations 1995 (S.I. 1995/3183).

Regulation 3 of these Regulations repeals one of the modifications made by section 63 of the Pensions Act 1995, with the effect that the period within which a person can institute proceedings before an employment tribunal is the same for both an equal treatment rule and an equality clause.

Regulation 5 modifies the time limits that apply to proceedings about failure to comply with the equal treatment rule. Regulation 5(2) extends the time limits on the backdating of a declaration of a person’s right to be admitted to a pension scheme. Regulation 5(2) also removes the obligation on the employer to contribute funds where rights to be admitted to the scheme are backdated. Regulation 5(1) and (3) make changes consequential on amendments to certain provisions of the Equal Pay Act 1970 which were made by the Equal Pay Act 1970 (Amendment) Regulations 2003 (S.I. 2003/1656).

An equality clause applies to terms of an employment contract, including terms which relate to a person’s membership of, or treatment under, an occupational pension scheme. The operation of an equality clause in relation to such a scheme is subject to any modifications made by the Secretary of State under section 66(4) of the Pensions Act 1995. Regulation 6 of these Regulations makes changes relating to the operation of the equality clause in relation to a court or tribunal’s power to backdate a declaration of a person’s right to be admitted to a pension scheme. The effect is equivalent to the amendment made by regulation 5(2) of these Regulations.

Parts 3 and 4 modify provisions of the Equal Pay Act 1970 that relate to the armed forces. Part 3 modifies such provisions in relation to the operation of an equal treatment rule in respect of an armed forces occupational pension scheme. Part 4 modifies such provisions as they affect the operation of an equality clause on terms of service in the armed forces which relate to the way in which persons become members of such a scheme, or members of such a scheme are treated.
