(2) Where—

- (a) a ship is being used in the course of public service activities or activities for the purpose of civil protection services; and
- (b) characteristics peculiar to those activities inevitably conflict with a provision of these Regulations, that provision does not apply in relation to that ship to the extent of that conflict.

(3) To the extent that a provision of these Regulations does not apply in relation to a ship because of paragraph (2) there is in relation to that ship a duty on the employer to ensure, so far as is reasonably practicable, the health and safety of workers who are or who are likely to be exposed to risks from mechanical vibration as a result of their work.

(4) The provisions of the General Duties Regulations and the Provision and Use of Work Equipment Regulations continue to apply to activities to which these Regulations apply; where these Regulations contain more stringent or specific provisions then such provisions apply.

(5) This regulation (other than paragraph (1)) and regulations 17 and 19 apply in relation to ships which are not United Kingdom ships, when they are in United Kingdom waters.

(2) Where the employer concludes that the nature and extent of any risks related to mechanical vibration to which workers are exposed are such that a detailed risk assessment is not necessary, the risk assessment shall explain the reasons for such a conclusion.

(3) The risk assessment shall be based on—

- (a) observation of specific working practices;
- (b) information provided by the manufacturer of the equipment and any other relevant information on the probable magnitude of vibration in the particular conditions of use; and

- (c) is reviewed—
 - (i) at suitable intervals;
 - (ii) if there are any significant changes in working condition which affect its validity; or
 - (iii) if the results of a health surveillance indicate that a further risk assessment is necessary; and
 - (d) is retained by him.

Elimination or control of exposure to vibration in the workplace

7.—(1) The employer shall ensure that the risks arising from exposure to mechanical vibration which are identified by the risk assessment are either—

- (a) eliminated at their source; or
- (b) reduced to a level which is as low as is reasonably practicable, having regard to the principles in regulation 5 of the General Duties Regulations.

(2) Where it is not reasonably practicable to eliminate risk at source pursuant to paragraph (1) and an exposure action value is likely to be exceeded, the employer shall reduce exposure to as low as is reasonably practicable under paragraph (1) by establishing and implementing a programme of organisational and technical measures appropriate to the activity, which may in particular include—

- (a) implementing alternative working methods that require less exposure to vibration;
- (b) use of appropriate work equipment of appropriate ergonomic design which, taking account of the work to be done, produces the least possible vibration;
- (c) providing equipment which reduces the risk of injuries caused by vibration;
- (d) implementing appropriate maintenance programmes for work equipment, the workplace and workplace systems;
- (e) altering the design and layout of workplaces and work stations;
- (f) providing adequate information and training to workers to ensure that work equipment is used correctly and safely in order to reduce exposure to mechanical vibration to as low as is reasonably practicable.
- (g) imposing limits on the duration and intensity of exposure to mechanical vibration;
- (h) altering work schedules and rest periods;
- (i) providing clothing to protect exposed workers from cold and damp; and
- (j) providing personal protective equipment against hand-arm vibration.

(3) The employer shall take into account the results of any health surveillance required by regulation 9 in applying the organisational and technical measures required by this regulation.

(4) Subject to regulation 12, the employer shall ensure that workers are not exposed to mechanical vibration exceeding the daily exposure limit value specified in regulation 5(1)(a) or 5(2)(a).

(5) Subject to regulation 12, following implementation of the organisational and technical measures taken in accordance with paragraph (2) the employer shall assess the effectiveness of such measures and if the daily exposure limit value is exceeded shall—

- (a) identify the reasons why the limit has been exceeded;
- (b) take such action as is necessary to reduce exposure to vibration below the exposure limit value; and

- (c) amend the measures taken in accordance with paragraph (2) to ensure that the limit is not exceeded again.
- (6) Except in an emergency, vibration in accommodation and rest spaces shall be reduced to a level compatible with their purpose and use.
- (7) The employer shall adapt measures which are taken in accordance with this regulation to workers who are particularly sensitive to vibration.
- (8) Paragraphs (4) and (5) shall not apply until 6 July 2010 where work equipment is used which—
 - (a) was first provided to workers prior to 6 July 2007; and
 - (b) despite the latest technical advances and organisational measures does not permit compliance with the exposure limit values;

but in such case, the employer shall take such measures provided for in these Regulations so as to limit the exposure to mechanical vibration so far as reasonably practicable.

Worker information and training

8.—(1) If—

- (a) the risk assessment indicates that there is a risk to the health of workers who are, or who are liable to be, exposed to vibration; or
- (b) workers are exposed to the risk of mechanical vibration in excess of an exposure action value;

the employer shall provide those workers and their representatives with suitable and sufficient information, instruction and training.

(2) Information, instruction and training provided in accordance with paragraph (1) shall include—

- (a) details of the measures taken in order to eliminate or reduce to as low as reasonably practicable the risks from mechanical vibration;
- (b) the exposure limit values and the exposure action values;
- (c) the results of the risk assessment carried out in accordance with regulation 6;
- (d) the circumstances in which workers are entitled to health surveillance under these Regulations;
- (e) the potential injuries which may arise from the work equipment in use;
- (f) safe working practices to minimise exposure to mechanical vibration;
- (g) how to detect and report signs of injury; and
- (h) the importance of detecting and reporting signs of injury.

Health surveillance

9.—(1) If—

- (a) the risk assessment indicates that there is a risk to the health of workers who are, or are likely to be, exposed to mechanical vibration; or
- (b) workers are likely to be exposed to vibration in excess of an exposure action value, the workers shall be entitled to health surveillance provided by the employer where such health surveillance is appropriate in accordance with paragraph (2).

(2) Health surveillance shall be appropriate where—

- (a) a link can be established between such exposure and an identifiable illness or harmful effects on health;
 - (b) it is probable that the illness or the effects occur in the worker's particular working conditions; and
 - (c) there are established techniques for detecting the illness or the harmful effects on health.
- (3) Where, as a result of health surveillance a worker is found to have an identifiable disease or adverse health effect which is considered by a doctor or an occupational health professional to be the result of exposure to mechanical vibration at work the employer shall—
- (a) ensure that the worker is informed by a doctor or other suitably qualified person of the result of the health surveillance and provided with information and advice regarding any health surveillance which he should undergo following the end of exposure;
 - (b) ensure that he is informed himself of any significant findings, taking into account any medical confidentiality;
 - (c) review the risk assessment concerned;
 - (d) review the measures taken to comply with regulation 7, taking into account any advice given by a doctor, occupational health professional or the MCA;
 - (e) consider assigning the worker to alternative work where there is no risk of further exposure to mechanical vibration, when advised to do so by a doctor or an occupational health care professional;
 - (f) arrange for the continued health surveillance of the worker;
 - (g) review the health surveillance of any other workers who have been similarly exposed, including, if recommended by a doctor or occupational health professional, arranging a medical examination for such workers.

- (5) The employer shall—
- (a) on reasonable notice being given, allow a worker access to his personal health records;
 - (b) keep the health records available in a suitable form;
 - (c) at the request of a worker, make the health records available to any person specified by the worker; and
 - (d) provide the Secretary of State with such copies of the health records as the Secretary of State may require.

Persons on whom duties are imposed

11.—(1) Where a person on whom a duty is imposed by any of the preceding provisions of these Regulations does not have control of the matter to which that provision relates because that person does not have responsibility for the operation of the ship, that duty also extends to any other person who has control of that matter.

- (2) It is the duty of every worker performing activities to which these Regulations apply to—
- (a) make full and proper use of all clothing and equipment with which he has been provided by the employer in pursuance of these Regulations; and
 - (b) give effect to all instructions and training with which he has been provided under regulation 8.

Exemptions

12.—(1) The Secretary of State may grant an exemption in respect of work on a particular ship from the requirement to comply with regulation 7(4) and (5) in relation to whole-body vibration where he is satisfied that the state of the art and the specific characteristics of the ship do not make it possible to comply with the whole body exposure limit value whatever technical and organisational measures are adopted.

(2) If the conditions in paragraph (3) are satisfied, the Secretary of State may grant an exemption from the requirements of regulation 7(4) and (5) where a worker is exposed to mechanical vibration which is usually below the exposure action values referred to in regulation 5 but which varies significantly from time to time and may sometimes exceed the exposure action value.

- (3) The conditions referred to in paragraph (2) are that—
- (a) the exposure value averaged over 40 hours is less than the exposure limit value;
 - (b) there is evidence to show that the risks from the pattern of exposure are lower than those from exposure at the exposure limit value;
 - (c) the worker concerned is subject to health surveillance in accordance with regulation 9; and
 - (d) the risk is reduced to as low as is reasonably practicable.

- (4) The Secretary of State may not grant an exemption under paragraphs (1) or (2) unless—

 - (b) the resulting risks are reduced to as low as is reasonably practicable; and
 - (c) health surveillance has been increased to a level considered appropriate by the Secretary of State.
- (5) Any exemption granted under this regulation shall—
