EXPLANATORY NOTE

The Iron and Steel (Compensation to Officers and Servants) (No. 2) Regulations 1953, provide that one of the conditions to be satisfied by a person claiming resettlement compensation for termination of employment is that the termination should have occurred not more than ten years after the coming into operation of those Regulations, i.e. not later than 31st December 1963. By substituting for that period a period of ten years from the exercise by the Iron and Steel Holding and Realisation Agency of their powers to secure the return of the employing company to private ownership (being the exercise which results in the loss of employment), the present Regulations extend the period during which claims for resettlement compensation may be made by persons who would otherwise have been prevented from doing so by reason of the postponement of the return of their employing company to private ownership. A necessary consequential extension is made to the time within which a claim must be put in.

Similarly, in the case of claimants for long term compensation, the present Regulations provide that one of the conditions to be satisfied is that the loss of employment or loss or diminution of emoluments or pension rights for which a claim is made must have occurred not later than ten years after the exercise by the Agency of their powers referred to above instead of ten years after the coming into operation of the 1953 Regulations, as hitherto provided.

These Regulations come into operation on the sixth day after their date and (under powers contained in Section 24(2) of the Iron and Steel Act 1953) are made to have effect retrospectively to 1st January 1964.
