EXPLANATORY NOTE

(This note is not part of the regulations, but is intended to indicate their general purport.)

Under the Family Allowances Act (Northern Ireland) 1966 it is a condition of eligibility for family allowances that the claimant or, if they are living together, the spouse of the claimant is in Northern Ireland; temporary presence in Northern Ireland is disregarded. These Regulations, which amend the Family Allowances (Qualifications) Regulations (Northern Ireland) 1970, provide, subject to certain exceptions, that where, under certain specified provisions, the emoluments of members of visiting forces, staffs of allied headquarters, diplomatic and consular personnel and other foreign government officials and persons connected with certain international organisations are exempted from income tax, their presence and, with a limited exception, the presence of their spouses in Northern Ireland is to be treated as temporary.
