EXPLANATORY NOTE

(This note is not part of the regulations, but is intended to indicate their general purport.)

These regulations amend the National Insurance (Earnings-related Benefit) Regulations (Northern Ireland) 1966.

The regulations provide that in calculating a person's reckonable earnings sums are to be included in his earnings for the income tax year in which they are received; hitherto they have been included in the earnings for the year in which they were earned.

The regulations contain an extended table for ascertaining benefit and 85 per cent. of average weekly earnings. This is calculated on the same basis as the table it replaces.

The regulations also contain transitional provisions.
