Review by the chief constable

18.—(1) Where a finding of misconduct has been recorded and a disposal has been imposed on a special constable under regulation 17(2)(a), (b) or (c), the special constable concerned is entitled to request the chief constable to review that finding or that disposal or both.

and separate disposals may be made in relation to separate findings.

(6) The special constable concerned must be notified in writing of the decision of the chief constable under paragraph (5) and must be provided with a written statement of the reasons made for making such a decision, within 7 days of the decision being made.

(7) The decision of the chief constable under paragraph (5) takes effect by substituting the decision or, as the case may be, part of the decision of the misconduct officer from the date on which that decision was made.

(8) Where a special constable decides to request a review of the finding made or the disposal imposed by the misconduct officer, the decision of the chief constable following such a review is final.

Suspension

19.—(1) Where a report, complaint or allegation is received from which it may reasonably be inferred that an act, omission or an alleged act or omission of a special constable concerned—

- (a) may amount to misconduct; or
- (b) may constitute a criminal offence, the special constable concerned may be suspended from duty by the deputy chief constable or, if regulation 12(2)(b) is applicable, the nominated officer.

(2) The deputy chief constable or, if regulation 12(2)(b) is applicable, the nominated officer—

- (a) may terminate a suspension imposed on the special constable under paragraph (1), with effect from the date of the suspension or any subsequent date;
- (b) must terminate a suspension imposed on the special constable concerned under paragraph (1) when—
 - (i) it is decided, in accordance with regulation 12(2)(b), that there will not be an inquiry into the report, complaint or allegation, unless the special constable concerned has submitted his or her resignation; or
 - (ii) misconduct proceedings have been completed but have not resulted in a disposal of dismissal from the Police Service or a requirement to resign from the Police Service as an alternative to dismissal, unless the special constable concerned submitted his or her resignation before misconduct proceedings were concluded.

(3) Where the deputy chief constable or the nominated officer have terminated the suspension of the special constable concerned, that special constable may not be suspended again in respect of the report, complaint or allegation which led to the initial suspension, unless further information comes to light and the deputy chief constable or the nominated officer, after considering that information, determine that it would be in the best interests of the Police Service to suspend that special constable for a further period.

(4) Subject to the provisions of this regulation, these Regulations apply to a special constable who has been suspended from duty.

Alleged criminal offence

20.—(1) Despite anything in regulations 11 to 19, where a report, complaint or allegation is received from which it may reasonably be inferred that a special constable may have committed a criminal offence, the deputy chief constable must, as soon as possible, refer the matter to the procurator fiscal.

(2) If the matter is referred to the procurator fiscal, the deputy chief constable or, if regulation 12(2)(b) is applicable, the nominated officer, may decide—

- (a) not to select an inquiry officer, in accordance with regulation 14, for the purpose of inquiring into the matter; or
- (b) where an inquiry officer has been selected in accordance with regulation 14, to instruct that officer not to give written notice to the special constable concerned of the matters specified in regulation 15(1) and not to carry out an inquiry into any matter arising out of or referred to in that report, complaint or allegation, in so far as it might be the subject of criminal proceedings, until the procurator fiscal has intimated either that criminal proceedings are not to be brought in respect of any matter arising out of or referred to in that report, complaint or allegation or, if he or she has intimated that criminal proceedings are to be brought, those proceedings are completed.

(3) If the deputy chief constable or, if regulation 12(2)(b) is applicable, the nominated officer decides to exercise the power conferred by paragraph (2), he or she must ensure that the special constable concerned is informed in writing that misconduct proceedings may be taken, irrespective of whether or not criminal proceedings are brought against him or her or of the disposal of any such proceedings.

(4) Where the criminal offence referred to in paragraph (1) may have been committed in any part of the United Kingdom (other than Scotland) or in any of the Channel Islands or the Isle of Man, the references to “procurator fiscal” are to be construed as references to the person who either has responsibility for considering whether to institute criminal proceedings in relation to the matter or has instituted such proceedings.

PART 5

(5) Nothing in this regulation applies to the reimbursement of expenses incurred by a special constable in the execution of that special constable's duty which have been authorised either generally or specifically by the chief constable where no allowance or periodic payment is payable under these Regulations and no determination has been made under regulation 22.

(6) In this regulation “periodic payment” has the meaning given by section 9(b) of the 2012 Act.

EXPLANATORY NOTE

(This note is not part of the Regulations)

These Regulations make provision in respect of special constables of the Police Service of Scotland. Part 2 and Schedule 1 make provision about governance. Regulation 3 and Schedule 1 set out the restrictions which are imposed on the private life of a special constable. Regulation 4 provides that a special constable must not have a business interest without the consent of the chief constable. A special constable, or a person applying to become a special constable, must give written notice of any business interests to the chief constable. Paragraph (4) sets out what constitutes a business interest. Regulation 5 specifies the qualifications for appointment as a special constable. Regulation 6 makes provision about the retirement of a special constable from office and provides that a special constable must retire upon reaching the age of 60 years, though the chief constable may postpone that. Regulations 7 and 8 make provision about the personal record of a special constable. Regulation 9 provides that a special constable must have fingerprints and a sample taken on appointment. Those fingerprints and samples are to be kept separate from those taken by the Police Service using the powers mentioned in regulation 9(2) and they are to be used only for the purpose of checking against other fingerprints or samples in connection with the investigation of an offence. They must be destroyed on the special constable leaving the Police Service.

Part 3 requires the Scottish Ministers to determine the normal periods of duty of a special constable. Part 4 and Schedule 2 make provision about misconduct in relation to special constables. Schedule 2 sets out the conduct which constitutes misconduct on the part of a special constable. Where a report, complaint or allegation is made against a special constable, the deputy chief constable (or if the deputy chief constable appoints a nominated officer, that nominated officer) considers the report, complaint or allegation and decides whether it contains a criminal allegation. If there are any allegations of criminality then the procedure in regulation 20 must be followed. If it appears there are no allegations of a criminal nature then the deputy chief constable or nominated officer, as the case may be, decides whether there should be an inquiry into the matter and, if so, selects an investigating officer to conduct the inquiry. If an inquiry is not considered necessary, no further action will be taken. Regulations 13, 14 and 16 set out who may be a nominated, inquiry or misconduct officer. Regulation 15 sets out the procedure for an inquiry and regulation 17 makes provision for actions after an inquiry, including disposals. A special constable may request a review by the chief constable under regulation 18. Regulation 20 requires the deputy chief constable or nominated officer to inform the procurator fiscal of the allegation if it is criminal and enables the misconduct investigation to be delayed until it is clear what is happening in relation to the criminal allegation.

Part 5 deals with allowances, periodic payments and expenses. The Scottish Ministers must determine the entitlement of special constables to such monies.

Part 6 makes provision about uniform and equipment. A special constable is entitled to be provided with such uniform and equipment as the Scottish Police Authority determines they need free of charge. Unless agreement is reached to the contrary, the uniform and equipment remain the property of the Authority.

Part 7 makes provision in relation to determinations which are made under these Regulations. Determinations are subject to consultation requirements.

Part 8 and Schedule 3 make transitional provision in respect of special constables who were previously special constables of police forces maintained under the Police (Scotland) Act 1967 and who have been transferred to become special constables of the Police Service of Scotland. It includes provision so that notice of retirement continues to run as if the reorganisation of the police had not taken place and any notice given under the previous law is valid for the purposes of the new law in these Regulations. Where a special constable was subject to ongoing misconduct proceedings under the Police (Scotland) Act 1967 then that process continues under the old law, subject to modifications of that law so that it may continue to operate. Where a special constable subject to such proceedings has a finding made against that special constable then it will be recorded on the personal record maintained by the chief constable of the Police Service.
