

THE COUNTER-TERRORISM (SANCTIONS) (EU EXIT) REGULATIONS 2019

REPORT UNDER SECTION 18 OF THE SANCTIONS AND ANTI-MONEY LAUNDERING ACT 2018 IN RELATION TO CRIMINAL OFFENCES

A: INTRODUCTION

1. This is a report under section 18 of the Sanctions and Anti Money Laundering Act 2018 (“the Act”) in relation to the Counter-Terrorism (Sanctions) (EU Exit) Regulations 2019 (“the Regulations”).
2. Section 18(2) of the Act requires a report to be laid before Parliament where regulations made under section 1 of the Act create offences for the purposes of enforcing any prohibitions or requirements imposed by those regulations, or for the purposes of preventing the circumvention of those prohibitions or requirements.
3. In accordance with section 18, this report: sets out the offences created by the Regulations (see Part B); explains why there are good reasons for the relevant prohibitions or requirements in the Regulations to be enforceable by criminal proceedings (Part C); and sets out the maximum terms of imprisonment that apply to those offences and why there are good reasons for those maximum terms (Part D).

B: THE OFFENCES

4. The prohibitions and requirements in the Regulations are aimed at furthering the prevention of terrorism in the UK or elsewhere and protecting UK national security interests and will ensure that the UK implements the relevant UN obligations. In these Regulations, “the relevant UN obligations” means the obligations the United Kingdom has by virtue of paragraph 1 and 2 of resolution 1373 (measures to prevent terrorism).
5. The Regulations confer a power on the Treasury to designate persons who are, or have been, involved in terrorist activity. The Regulations then provide a number of prohibitions in relation to designated persons. The provisions include that no person is to deal with the assets of the person or provide funds or other economic resources to them or for their benefit.
6. The offences created by the Regulations fall into the following categories:
 - a. contravening the principal prohibitions in the Regulations (e.g. breaching an asset-freeze) or trying to circumvent the principal prohibitions;
 - b. knowingly or recklessly providing false information for the purpose of obtaining a licence;

- c. breaching the terms of a licence;
 - d. failing to comply with requirements relating to the providing and recording of information; and
 - e. disclosing confidential information in certain cases where the designation power has been used.
7. Details of each of the offences created by these Regulations, the prohibitions and requirements to which those offences relate, and the maximum penalties relating to each offence, are set out:
- a. in relation to financial sanctions, in the table in Annex A to this report; and
 - b. in relation to the disclosure of confidential information where the designation power has been used, in the table in Annex B to this report

C: REASONS FOR CREATING THE OFFENCES

8. In order to fulfil the stated purpose of this sanctions regime, the prohibitions and requirements in these Regulations need to be properly enforced.
9. There are several mechanisms through which these measures can be enforced without criminal proceedings. These include the imposition of monetary penalties for breaching financial sanctions.
10. Having the ability to take enforcement action through criminal proceedings, alongside these other enforcement measures, is appropriate for several reasons. The offences act as a deterrent in relation to the commission of serious acts and omissions which would undermine the purpose of the regime. They also allow the UK government to take a proportionate response where severity of the act or omission warrants it.
11. Importantly, the offences created by the Regulations are consistent with the offences contained in the legislation which the Regulations will replace. Failing to create offences would mean that there would be an enforcement gap between existing legislation and the Regulations. Special care has been taken to ensure that offences are consistent with existing offences while not duplicating any offences that will exist when these Regulations come into force.
12. These issues are addressed in more detail below in relation to the different types of offences in the Regulations.

Breaches of, and circumvention of, the principal financial prohibitions

13. The prohibitions contained in regulations 11 to 15 prohibit persons from dealing with funds or economic resources owned, held or controlled by a designated person and from making funds or economic resources available to or for the benefit of a designated person, where the person doing so knows or has reasonable cause to suspect that this is the case. Regulation 16 prohibits intentional conduct whose known object or effect is to circumvent any of those prohibitions.

14. A breach of these prohibitions is a serious matter because such actions undermine the purpose of the sanctions regime. In this case, breaches could result in the flow of funds to those who are involved in terrorism.
15. The ability to institute criminal proceedings in relation to these matters serves as an effective deterrent. It also enables the UK government to take a proportionate response which corresponds to the severity of the breach.
16. The ability to institute criminal proceedings sits alongside other enforcement measures relating to financial sanctions. In particular, the Regulations provide the Office of Financial Sanctions Implementation (OFSI) with the ability to impose civil monetary penalties under Part 8 of the Policing and Crime Act 2017 to enforce breaches of these prohibitions¹. Enabling these prohibitions to be enforceable by criminal proceedings alongside these other enforcement measures ensures that a range of enforcement options is available to enforcement bodies, enabling them to take action that is proportionate to the breach in question.
17. The Regulations are consistent with existing financial sanctions offences. In particular, the financial sanctions offences in the Regulations will in part replace financial sanctions offences and penalties that were created in Part 1 of the Terrorist Asset-Freezing etc. Act 2010. This will ensure that there is no gap in the UK government's ability to comply with its international obligations under resolution 1373 or its ability to impose and enforce domestic financial sanctions against others those that pose a national security threat to UK interests.
18. As provided for in s.59(1) SAMLA, the government will repeal the Terrorist Asset Freezing etc. Act after EU Exit. Once this has happened, there will be no overlap between the criminal offences in the Regulations and other criminal offences relating to financial sanctions imposed for the purposes of combatting domestic terrorism.

Breaches of prohibitions and requirements relating to licensing

19. The licensing offences are intended to ensure that people do not obtain licences based on false information or documents and also that any licence conditions are complied with. The creation of criminal offences will help ensure robust compliance with the Regulations. The system of licensing cannot effectively operate without a strong disincentive to breaching the terms of a licence or making misleading applications.

Breaches of requirements relating to information

20. As set out in Annex A, the Regulations require:

- a. banks and other relevant firms, businesses and professions to report relevant information to the Treasury in relation to financial sanctions; and
 - b. designated persons to provide information concerning their assets to the Treasury;
21. Enabling requirements to be enforceable by criminal proceedings ensures greater compliance with the Regulations. The Treasury relies on reporting by (a) relevant firms and (b) designated persons to assess compliance with the financial sanctions Regulations, and is better able to target its compliance efforts according to the information received.

Breaches of the confidential information prohibitions

22. Regulation 9 contains prohibitions relating to the treatment of information relating to the statement of reasons for a person's designation and states that in certain circumstances the Treasury may specify that any of that information should be treated as confidential.
23. A breach of these prohibitions is a serious matter because disclosing information supporting the reasons why a person has been designated, that is not already available to the public from other sources, could undermine national security or damage international relations or could impede the prevention or detection of serious crime in the UK or elsewhere.
24. The ability to institute criminal proceedings in relation to these matters serves as an effective deterrent. It also enables the UK government to take a proportionate response which corresponds to the severity of the breach.

D: REASONS FOR MAXIMUM PENALTIES

25. The penalties imposed by the Regulations are set out in Annexes A and B. In all cases the penalties are either consistent with penalties relating to offences in legislation that will be replaced by the Regulations or consistent with similar offences in other existing legislation. Further detail on the maximum sentences relating to the different categories of offence is set out below.

Breaches of, and circumvention of, the principal financial prohibitions

26. In relation to financial sanctions, the government committed in the White Paper consultation on sanctions² to ensure consistency of offences and penalties for financial sanctions contained across domestic legislation. In accordance with that commitment, the Regulations provide for penalties consistent with those provided for in the Terrorist Asset Freezing etc. Act 2010 (and are consistent with other Regulations made under the Sanctions & Anti-Money Laundering Act 2018). The maximum sentence on indictment for financial sanctions in that Act (i.e. TAFSA) is seven years. There is no good reason for the government to revisit the level of penalties on exit from the EU.

The government considers the maximum penalty provides an effective deterrent and is proportionate compared to other serious crime penalties.

Licensing and information offences

27. The Regulations provide that the maximum term of imprisonment for financial sanctions licensing offences is seven years imprisonment. Due to the scope for circumventing sanctions through improper use of a financial sanctions licence, there are good reasons for the maximum term of imprisonment provided for licensing offences under the Regulations to be set at the same level as for breaches of the principal financial prohibitions.
28. The Regulations provide that the maximum term of imprisonment for financial sanctions information offences is six months. The level of harm associated with a failure to provide information, that is not related with another form of breach, is not deemed sufficiently high to warrant a higher maximum sentence.
29. The Regulations provide that the maximum term of imprisonment for the offence of disclosure of confidential information is two years which is in line with the equivalent offence under the Terrorist Asset-Freezing etc. Act 2010.

E: CONCLUSIONS

30. As set out in this report:
 - a. There are good reasons for each of the prohibitions and requirements set out in the Regulations to be enforceable by criminal proceedings. The ability to enforce these measures by criminal proceedings is an effective deterrent, it is consistent with existing legislation and, in conjunction with the use of other enforcement measures, it enables the government to take a proportionate response to potentially serious acts and omissions which would undermine the purpose of the sanctions regime. Importantly, these Regulations do not create criminal offences where it has been judged that there already exists a criminal offence that can effectively enforce the prohibitions or requirements in question.
 - b. There are also good reasons for the maximum terms of imprisonment that attach to those offences: the maximum penalties are consistent with penalties relating to offences in legislation that will be replaced by the Regulations, or consistent with similar offences in other existing legislation; they are an effective deterrent; and they are proportionate to the seriousness of the types of offences to which they relate.
